CMS Consumer Products Group

May 2013

Overview

The Consumer Products sector is a fiercely competitive market. From all aspects of the supply chain, organisations are under pressure to improve yield, cut costs and deliver value, while also reducing environmental impact and provide sustainable solutions. Businesses must cope with fluctuations in the cost of raw materials, funding pressures and consolidation in the market and to do so, you need a legal team who understands the market and your needs.

As consumer product legislation differs around the world, you will have access to a pan-European and global team. We know the industry and help not only understand the law, but shape its future.

Value we bring to our clients

Proven international capability built on deep local knowledge

Our clients trust us to handle their legal affairs for two principal reasons:

- Each CMS office is a leading practice in its local jurisdiction and our advice reflects our understanding of national laws, culture and business practices.
- CMS offices are experienced in working together to provide international advice underpinned by common procedures and the same high standards of quality and commitment.

Client-based solutions

Our approach is to work together, tailoring advice to reflect our clients' needs and the markets in which they operate. What does this mean in practice?

- Advice, assistance and representation from specialist lawyers who work to the same exacting standards wherever they are based.
- Access to industry expertise and sector insights across European markets.
- Genuinely integrated project management and coordination.
- Flexibility of resources and the ability to tailor staffing levels to suit specific project needs.
- High standards of service quality and responsiveness.

Sound commercially relevant advice

Our teams are structured around industry and product specialisations, rather than divided along geographical lines, combining specialist expertise, industry knowledge and the experience of relevant assignments. This structure encourages the sharing of experience and sector knowledge, discourages 'reinventing the wheel' and enables our lawyers to deliver cutting-edge legal services on national and cross-border deals.
